YESTERDAY

Ana Hale posted in Fulton.

What day Ye, I've got teachers starting with Edmodo. Use student lunch numbers? Or code names like Hale1, Hale2, Hale3

Ana Hale likes Heather Cox's post in Fulton.

Just an FYI...the Vanguard cat is officially out of the bag. The news was sent out in the VanWeekly today. Until Hoke determines what will happen with the position, Andrea Tseng-Rioux is going to serve as the lead and our dear, sweet Tanis will be supporting with some behind the scenes work! I'm still finishing out Dec. through Jan. 5th with the team though, so I'm doing double duty until then. 😊

Oh my gosh! Take a look at this tool. It is called the Knoster Model. If you are working with reluctant teachers or overwhelmed teachers, use this visual. For example, if a teacher is "Frustrated" they need support with Resources. If a teacher is "Confused" they need help with developing a vision (where technology fits in with their standards and goals). How powerful could this tool be???

This young man is the brother of one of my favorite students, my bonus daughter. In fact, I used to drive them to and from school after they moved the second semester of her senior year and didn't have transportation. Jeremy was so full of life and would be rapping the lyrics to the latest hit in the back seat. Typical goofy freshman stuff. His illness has been so hard on his sisters. I cried seeing the story of his recovery. Keep him in your prayers.

- Going 1:1 with 5th Grade Laptops
- Redistribute the 30 ipads that are not being used in the Library to TAG and other teachers that will use them!

After joining in on a serious PL meeting today, I altered a hyperdoc I had to fit the idea of having students demonstrate their understanding based on their analysis of their own learning goals in relation to pre-assessment data. This document would allow teachers to curate information based on the standard, and make suggestions on how students can demonstrate their understanding without limiting them to certain assignments. Pre-assessment data allows them to know at which which DOK level they should begin for each standard. Please feel free to use it if you think it would be helpful!

Take a look at this article about bumping up against errors. How cool would it be for students to work through they are wrong answers to figure out what went wrong on Show Me or Screencastify or a similar tool? The research shows this could be crucial to learning. If you're interested in learning mindsets this is the perfect article for you.

If folks did a battle of the bands they'd like it more!
Two thoughts-
1: we have to stop calling it badging and awarding actual badges. Credentialing can be anything--it's about mastery progression!
2: extrinsic motivation will only ever take us so far. The excitement of badges has worn off--people need a deeper 'why'

Hey everyone- I found a web tool that rocks! The beauty of it is teachers can make Milestone-like tests including "drag and drop," multiple choice with multiple right answers, and embed pics into questions. Also, the flashcards are awesome! Teacher can put them on the interactive whiteboards and use them as a station. The mind map is really cool too. Check it out if you can. I'm going to chat with one of the creators week after next if anyone wants in on the Skype.
